When a group of Latino professionals in finance and accounting recently held their first awards ceremony, they named CFO Mike Cavanagh Executive of the Year. Both Cavanagh and JPMorgan Chase were honored for their leadership at a gathering in New York.

Cavanagh was honored for his active advocacy of the company's relationship with ALPFA, the Association of Latino Professionals in Finance and Accounting, as well as his own accomplishments in the field. ALPFA also awarded the Corporate Sponsor of the Year award to JPMorgan Chase in recognition of the company's support of the organization and its mission.

Diversity executive Mark Settles represented the firm at the October 28th ceremony and accepted the awards on behalf of Cavanagh and JPMorgan Chase.

The Encuentro awards reception was hosted by the New York chapter of ALPFA. More than 100 members attended, representing such companies as Bank of America, Merrill Lynch, Ernst & Young, Morgan Stanley and PricewaterhouseCoopers, among others.

Four other awards were presented at the event:

- Outstanding service to ALPFA
- Hispanic role model of the year
- Sponsor of the year (CPA firm)
- Student chapter of the year
