Code of Conduct — It Begins with Me

JPMorgan Chase is the respected company it is today because of our commitment to being accountable, straightforward and honest in all of our business dealings. Our people, our products and services, and our enduring dedication to integrity have made us one of the largest and most respected financial institutions in the world. It is paramount for us all – not only as a company, but also as culture carriers – to uphold that mission each and every day.

Our Code of Conduct reflects this shared obligation. We operate with the highest level of integrity and ethical conduct, at all times. We do the right thing – even when it’s not the easy thing. We have zero tolerance for unethical behavior. And, we abide by the letter of the laws and regulations everywhere we do business.

It also is important for each of us to speak up when we see something that doesn’t look or feel right. We all share this responsibility, which is key to preserving and building on this proud heritage. If you know of a possible violation of the Code or other improper behavior, report it.

The Code of Conduct is a valuable resource as we continue to meet our obligations to all of our constituents – customers, the Board, shareholders, regulators – and ourselves.

As a company, we’re only as good as our people, and our people are the best. Remember, our integrity begins with you.

Closing Thoughts 42
1.0 A Shared Responsibility to Our Heritage

Our people, our services and our enduring commitment to integrity have made us one of the largest and most respected financial institutions in the world. We all share responsibility for preserving and building on this proud heritage. A strong reputation can’t be bought or sold and should never be compromised. Code of Conduct – It begins with you.
1.1 Personal Integrity

Thousands of employees from our many predecessor institutions have worked to build our success — now, we are responsible for preserving it. Our Code of Conduct is an important tool in that respect. It lays out the expectations the Company has for each of us and provides the information and the resources we need to conduct business ethically and in compliance with the law everywhere we operate. Our Code helps to ensure that the actions we take today will preserve this great legacy for the future.

The Code applies to all of us.

All who work for, or on behalf of, JPMorgan Chase have a duty to demonstrate the highest standards of business conduct. Our Code applies to employees and directors of JPMorgan Chase & Co. and its direct and indirect subsidiaries (the Code will refer to these companies as “our Company” or “JPMorgan Chase”). In general, consultants, agents and contract or temporary workers are expected to comply with the underlying principles of the Code as well as the Supplier Code of Conduct.

Throughout the Code, you’ll find information, links to definitions of key terms, Q&A’s and links to some related policies to guide you in making ethical decisions. What you won’t find is the answer to every question you may face at work or every related policy. In the absence of a specific policy, you have a responsibility to use good judgment, comply with the spirit of the Code and seek help from your Code Specialist if you have any questions or concerns.

Your Code Specialist is an important resource.

Every employee has at least one Code Specialist who is a representative from the Compliance Department. Contact the Code Specialist assigned to your region, Line of Business or Corporate Function group for help with any Code-related matter or ethical issue. You can also reach out for assistance to other resources at our Company including your Compliance Officer or Human Resources.

Your Code Specialist can answer questions about the Code, Company policies and procedures and can explain how the rules apply in a specific situation.
1.2 Ethical Decision-making

Each of us has a responsibility to uphold the Code; in fact, compliance with the Code is a term and condition of employment with our Company. This means you must know the Code, you must do the right thing when it comes to your own conduct, and you must speak up about conduct by others that might violate our Code or Company policies. Cooperate as directed by our Company with any investigation, inquiry, examination or litigation related to our Company’s business.

Prior to joining our Company, new hires are required to provide an affirmation that they have read and understand the Code, will comply with it and will report potential or actual violations as required by the Code. New hires must complete Code training shortly after they begin work. All employees are required to complete additional Code training and provide a new affirmation periodically, usually annually. Compliance with these requirements is a condition of employment.

No business unit or location in our Company can adopt policies that are less specific than the Code, but some do have rules that are more specific. If your business unit has more specific policies, you must know and follow those policies.

We will take actions necessary to enforce our Code.

We rely on you to practice sound decision-making and take actions that will preserve an ethical workplace. Remember, you are in charge of your decisions. No one, at any level, has the authority to tell you to do something unethical or illegal. If you are ever unsure of the proper course of action, the decision tree can help.
In any ethical dilemma, ask yourself:

1. Is it legal and compliant with our Code and our policies?
2. Can I justify this decision or action to my manager or department head?
3. Am I sure it would not cause loss or harm to our clients, customers, markets, shareholders, or Company?
4. Is it consistent with our Company's Business Principles?
5. Does it protect and enhance our reputation and help the community?

NOT SURE
Seek guidance before proceeding.

NO
Stop - this action could have serious consequences.

Your decision appears to comply with our Code.
1.2.1 Manager Responsibilities

Managers have an even greater level of accountability.

If you are a manager, your employees look to you to lead with integrity. Make sure you know the Code and can either help employees with questions or direct them to someone who can. If an ethical issue or a potential violation is brought to your attention, you cannot investigate it yourself. Report it through the Code Reporting Hotline or another proper channel and ask the employee who came forth to do the same. The matter will be investigated by the appropriate party, such as Global Security, Human Resources, Legal or other function as appropriate. Make sure the reporting employee is protected from any form of retaliation.

Managers are responsible for supervising the activities and conduct of employees in their reporting chain. Consult with Human Resources when you identify a concern, any misconduct and on how to prevent its recurrence. Managers who fail to take action and report misconduct may be held responsible for their failure to report misconduct or to take steps to address or remediate an issue.

1.3 Compliance with the Law

We work in a highly regulated industry. Being aware of — and complying with — the laws and regulations under which we operate is not just a critical part of our business, but fundamental to who we are. Remember that it is important to comply with not just the letter, but also the spirit and intent, of the law. Violating the law — or engaging in unfair, deceptive and abusive acts or practices — may weaken customer confidence and put our reputation at risk, and can result in regulator criticism, legal action, fines and penalties, and other negative repercussions for our Company.

If complying with any provision of our Code would cause you to violate local law, you should follow the local law. But if the conflict is between local custom and our Code, we comply with the Code. If your business unit or location has policies that are more specific than the Code, follow the more specific policies.

As an employee, you are expected to know and comply with the laws and regulations that apply to you and, if you ever have questions, to contact your Code Specialist, your Compliance Officer or Human Resources for help.

1.4 Dealing with Confidential Information

Trust is essential to our business success. Customers, suppliers and companies with whom we do business trust us to be good stewards of their information, whether that information relates to financial, personal or business matters.

Confidential information is information that you acquire, receive, learn, create, develop or have access to because of your employment at our Company and that is not made readily available to the public. The loss or unauthorized disclosure or access of confidential information could result in harm to our Company, customers, clients, business partners, suppliers or employees. This includes personal information about our employees and our customers and non-public information about clients and partners and their business. It can be written, oral, telephonic or electronic and includes a wide variety of data, from technology applications, business strategies and customer lists to credit procedures, customer preferences and personnel information. Confidential information may pertain to our Company itself, or to the customers, suppliers, or companies with whom we do business.

How do you know what information is confidential information? A best practice is to assume that all information you have about our Company and its business (including information concerning past, present and prospective customers, business partners, suppliers, directors and employees) is confidential, unless the contrary is clear.
Disclose confidential information only on a need-to-know basis.

You have a duty to protect confidential information and to take precautions before sharing it with anyone, inside or outside the workplace. A legitimate business need for knowing or having access to confidential information must exist before that information may be shared or received. Need-to-know is based on whether a person needs the information in the normal exercise of their employment or duties.

Don’t share confidential information with friends or family or third parties, and don’t discuss it in places where others could hear you. Don’t access or use confidential information, and don’t disclose it to fellow employees who are not involved in providing services to the owner of the information, unless you are authorized and legally permitted to do so. Finally, don’t send confidential information, including internal communications such as intranet postings, outside our Company (including to your own personal email address), unless permitted to do so under applicable law, regulations, and Company policy or procedures.

Before disclosing confidential information:

• Be sure you are permitted to do so, under applicable law, regulations, and Company policies or procedures.
• Disclose it only to those who are authorized to receive it and who need to know it to do their job.
• Limit the amount of information shared to what is required to achieve the stated business purpose.
• Obtain a JPMorgan Chase approved confidentiality agreement, non-disclosure agreement or other agreement with appropriate JPMorgan Chase approved privacy clauses, if required, when sharing it with someone outside our Company.
• Make sure the recipient knows that the information is confidential and any restrictions related to its use or dissemination.

The restriction on disclosing confidential information is not intended to prevent employees from reporting to our Company’s management or directors, the government or a regulator, employees’ attorneys, or a court under seal, concerns of any potential or actual Code violation; or to prevent employees from reporting retaliation for reporting such concerns. It’s also not intended to prevent employees from responding truthfully to questions or requests from the government, a regulator or in a court of law.

Nothing in the Code should be interpreted to prevent employees from engaging in activities that are protected under laws and regulations that allow employees to discuss or disclose compensation information.

Safeguard confidential information of prior employers, too.

Your responsibility to protect confidential information also applies to work you may have done before coming to JPMorgan Chase. Sharing confidential information from a former employer is unethical and can also expose you and JPMorgan Chase to legal liabilities. Do not disclose any confidential information of a prior employer unless it’s already been made public through no action of your own.

What if ...

A co-worker asks me to share customer information from my former employer. Can I do that?

No, you must not disclose that information. The customer information of your former employer is that employer’s (or its customer’s) confidential information and you have an obligation to protect the information, even after leaving that company. By disclosing the information, you are breaching this Code, as well as obligations to your former employer (or its customer). You may also be exposing yourself and our Company to legal liabilities. Remember, you will have an obligation to protect the proprietary and confidential information of our Company, too, should you leave to go work somewhere else.
There are special rules, laws and regulations regarding processing and safeguarding personal information and client confidential information.

Each of us has a special responsibility to protect the privacy of our customers, clients, partners and other third parties, and the confidentiality of their information. This responsibility may be imposed by law, may arise out of agreements with or representations to our customers, or may be based on policies or practices adopted by our Company. Certain jurisdictions have regulations relating specifically to the privacy of individuals and business and institutional customers. Various business units and geographic areas within JPMorgan Chase have internal policies regarding customer and employee privacy.

Customer information should never be disclosed to anyone inside or outside our Company except as permitted by law in the proper conduct of our business, where disclosure is required by legal process or where the Compliance or the Legal Department otherwise determines it is appropriate.

What if ...

I emailed a report to a client and accidentally attached the wrong report that contained information about another client. I’ve asked the client to delete the email, do I have to do anything else?

Yes, you must report it to your Privacy Incident Response Team. Contact your Line of Business, Corporate, or Regional Privacy Incident Response Team Manager for guidance.

1.5 Sharing Concerns and Reporting Violations

Preserving our heritage and protecting our Company’s reputation is the responsibility of every employee in every location. If you see or suspect that something is illegal or unethical, you have not only the right, but also the obligation, to speak up and share your concerns.

We encourage employees to ask questions and have open conversations with their managers on business and conduct concerns. We rely on our employees to speak up when something is unclear.

You are required to promptly report any potential or actual violations of the Code, any internal Company policy or any law or regulation related to our business. Reporting is required whether the violation involves you or someone else subject to the Code. You should report any potential or actual illegal conduct, or conduct that violates the underlying principles of the Code, by any of our customers, suppliers, consultants, employees, contract or temporary workers, business partners or agents. Just as you will be held responsible for your own actions, you can also be held responsible for not reporting the actions of others if you knew or should have known that they were in violation of any applicable policy, law or regulation.

In addition, your reporting obligations to our Company do not prevent you from reporting to the government or regulators conduct that you believe to be in violation of law or potential violation of law.
What if...

I’ve seen a colleague do something that I think may be a violation of the Code of Conduct, but I’m not sure and frankly, it doesn’t directly affect me. Why should I say anything?

We rely on our employees to report misconduct and unethical behavior even if it doesn’t affect the employee making the report. A violation, left unreported, can cause immeasurable damage to our reputation and put your co-workers, our customers and our Company at risk. It can also lead to regulatory and legal consequences. Even if you’re not sure, report concerns and potential or actual violations — the Code requires it.

You can use our toll-free Code Reporting Hotline to report any potential or actual violation.

Operated by an independent third-party reporting service, our Code Reporting Hotline is one way to report your concerns. You can contact the hotline any time, night or day, to speak to a professional interviewer, or you can file an online report. Translators are available so you can report in your preferred language. Your concern will be documented in detail and forwarded to our Company for investigation. You may report anonymously where permitted by applicable law.

The Code Reporting Hotline number is 1-855-JPMCODE (1-855-576-2633). From many jurisdictions outside the U.S. and Canada you will need to dial an access number before dialing the hotline number. You can also file a report online at www.tnwgrc.com/jpmc.

There are other people and resources you can contact regarding violations.

You can always discuss issues relating to the Code with your Code Specialist, your Compliance Officer or Human Resources. Depending on the kind of question you have or concern you wish to share, there are others you may contact too. Refer to the Need to Report a Potential Violation or Other Concern? chart for more information.

All investigations of possible Code violations are conducted by the appropriate party, such as Global Security, Human Resources, Legal or other function as appropriate. Do not investigate the matter yourself.

Report criminal, legal or regulatory proceedings that involve you personally.

You must immediately report to Human Resources the following incidents that involve you personally, whether they relate to the business of our Company or not:

- Any arrest, charge, conviction or legal proceeding relating to a criminal charge, or in the United Kingdom a police caution, including unresolved criminal charges, however minor
- Any inquiry or action by a financial services regulator, law enforcement agency or similar authority, including any denial or suspension of a license or request seeking to take testimony or interview you regarding conduct at our Company or any other financial services institution
- Any legal claims against you asserting fraud, dishonesty, or unfair or unethical conduct related to financial services

Generally, employees do not need to report minor traffic offenses. If you have questions on whether you need to report a criminal, legal or regulatory proceeding, contact Human Resources.

Employees who are acting as attorneys for our Company have additional reporting obligations. You should know and comply with these rules if they apply to you.
1.5.1 Non-retaliation Statement

Sharing concerns without fear of retaliation.

Don’t be afraid to speak up and promote an ethical culture at JPMorgan Chase. We are counting on you to do so. You are our Company’s eyes and ears and we rely on you to tell us about any suspected misconduct so that we can take action.

We strictly prohibit intimidation or retaliation against anyone who makes a good faith report about a potential or actual violation of the Code or any JPMorgan Chase policy or procedure, or any law or regulation. We also strictly prohibit any intimidation or retaliation against anyone who assists with any inquiry or investigation of any such violation.

Be assured that the information you provide will be handled discreetly and shared only with those we have a need to inform, such as regulators and those who are involved in investigating, resolving and, if necessary, remediating the issue. Employees who have concerns about or are aware of possible retaliatory action must report it, either to their manager, Human Resources representative or the Code Reporting Hotline.

1.6 Administration of the Code of Conduct

Our Code, which is administered by Global Compliance, is a living document that should serve as your first-line resource for ethical decision-making. It may be amended from time to time, and all amendments are effective immediately upon posting. You can access the most current edition of the Code on our Company intranet. Note that the Code and some related documents have been translated into a number of languages. Translations are available on the Code home page or from your Code Specialist.

The Code of Conduct Compliance group may provide interpretations of the Code, in consultation with the Chief Compliance Officer or the General Counsel, where appropriate. Any waiver of the provisions of this Code for a member of the Operating Committee or a director must be made by the Board of Directors and will be promptly disclosed to JPMorgan Chase stockholders. The Code of Conduct does not create any rights to continued employment and is not an employment contract.

What if ...

I report misconduct, will I be penalized because I made the report?

No, we strictly prohibit intimidation or retaliation against anyone who reports misconduct. If you think someone is retaliating against you because you spoke up, say something to your manager or Human Resources, or call the Code Reporting Hotline.

2.0 A Shared Responsibility to Our Customers and the Marketplace

We know that trust lies at the core of every customer, client and Company interaction. To build long-lasting business relationships, we follow the law and treat our customers the way we would want to be treated ourselves – in an open, honest and respectful manner. We empower our customers to make informed decisions about the products and services we offer and to select the ones that best meet their needs and circumstances. And in those circumstances where we fail to live up to our standards, we identify the problem and fix it as quickly as possible. It’s just the way we work.
2.1 Insider Trading and Information Barriers

As an employee of a financial services company, you may have access to material, non-public information ("MNPI") about our Company, our clients and other companies that conduct business with us. MNPI is information that is not known by the public, but if it were, would likely affect the market price of the securities issued by a company (ours or any other, including private companies that issue publicly traded financial instruments) or be considered important to a reasonable investor in deciding to buy or sell those securities. In certain jurisdictions, MNPI may also be referred to as Inside Information. The terms MNPI and Inside Information are used interchangeably in the Code of Conduct.

How do you know if information is “non-public”?

The best practice is to consider all information non-public unless it has been publicly announced or otherwise disseminated in a way that does not breach any confidentiality or fiduciary duty.

How do we know if the information is “material, non-public information” or “inside information”?

The best practice is to consider all non-public information about publicly traded securities, activities or financial condition of a company and its employees as MNPI and consult with the Legal or Compliance Departments or your regional Compliance Control Room.

There are many laws and regulations that prohibit the misuse of MNPI. We have policies and procedures designed to comply with these laws and guard against even the appearance that something is improper.

As an employee:

- You may not buy or sell securities in your own account or any account over which you exercise control (either alone or with others, including client accounts), when you are in possession of MNPI relating to those securities (see the Personal Investment Activities section).
- You may not pass along MNPI or tip anyone to buy or sell securities while in possession of MNPI relating to those securities.

These rules apply to the securities of our Company and of other companies, no matter how the MNPI is acquired. Our Information Safeguarding and Barriers Policy - MNPI Firmwide Supplement and other trading policies provide additional details on sales and trading activities while in possession of MNPI. If you believe that you have come into possession of such information, you should contact your Compliance Officer or your regional Compliance Control Room for further guidance.

What if ...

I learned some information in a meeting with a client that could be MNPI. What should I do?

You must contact your regional Compliance Control Room or your Compliance Officer. You are prohibited not only from using the information to buy or sell securities, but also from telling others.
Our Information Safeguarding and Barriers Policy - MNPI Firmwide Supplement is designed to further protect MNPI.

Our system of Information Barriers is designed to safeguard and restrict the flow of MNPI and keep us in compliance with applicable laws and regulations. Some business units and locations have additional policies governing Information Barriers.

The Information Safeguarding and Barriers Policy - MNPI Firmwide Supplement prohibits anyone in an area that routinely has access to MNPI (also known as a “Private Side” area or as an “inside” area) from communicating MNPI, however it’s obtained, to anyone in an area that does not generally have a legitimate and continuous business need to have access to MNPI (also known as a “Public Side” area), unless coordinated through the Compliance Control Room or your Compliance Officer. The policy also restricts the flow of information within Private Side areas and MNPI should only be shared on a need-to-know basis.

Make sure you know and comply with all policies that apply to you.

2.2 Personal Investment Activities

You have a duty to conduct your personal investment activities consistent with our Company’s reputation in mind and in compliance with all applicable laws, regulations and Company policies. We trust you to devote your time at work to serving the interests of our clients and our Company, not your personal interests. (Note that this section of the Code discusses personal investment activities. See the Personal Finances section for information about other personal financial matters.)

With regard to personal securities or other financial transactions, including private investments, you make:

• Always base your decisions on a philosophy of long-term investment objectives, not short-term or speculative trading (such as day trading or trading based on rumors).
• Never buy or sell securities or tip others to do so while in possession of MNPI relating to those securities (see the Insider Trading and Information Barriers section).
• Make sure your trading and investment activities are within your financial means.
• Do not ask for or accept any preferential terms or conditions in connection with any personal trading or investments.

In general, employees should not invest in a competitor of JPMorgan Chase (unless it is a publicly traded company). A “competitor” for these purposes includes financial services companies and others engaged in any business we are involved in (even if not currently in direct competition with our Company), such as banks, asset managers, depository institutions, credit unions, lenders, investment banks, some insurers and insurance agencies, and securities brokers, dealers and underwriters.
What if...

An old friend has asked me to make an investment in a start-up bank in our hometown. There is no JPMorgan Chase presence in the area and the new bank’s business model is very different from ours, so the new bank won’t be competing with our Company for business. Can I make the investment?

No. Employees are generally not permitted to invest in a competitor of JPMorgan Chase (other than publicly traded entities), and any financial services company is considered a JPMorgan Chase competitor for these purposes, even if there is currently no direct competition between the two. As such, you should not make the investment.

Our Personal Account Dealing Policy - Firmwide establishes trading limitations and includes requirements for preclearance of personal securities transactions, minimum holding periods and, in some countries, the use of approved brokers. Depending on your Line of Business and job function, you may also be required to comply with a supplemental Line of Business or Corporate Function Policy, in addition to this policy.

Policies that apply to you may also apply to your spouse, domestic partner, minor children or anyone you provide significant financial support.

Contact the Personal Account Dealing Compliance group if you are not sure whether an account is covered by these rules.

What about trading in JPMorgan Chase securities?

As an employee, you may have been granted stock or other securities in our Company as part of your compensation. All sales are subject to the insider trading and applicable personal investment and account dealings policies outlined in this Code. For some employees, additional restrictions may apply as identified below. You are also permitted, again subject to the policies outlined in our Code, to buy stock on your own. Diversification is important too, however, and you should carefully consider whether it is wise to concentrate all of your assets in JPMorgan Chase or other financial companies. In general, you are not required to buy or hold JPMorgan Chase stock and you won’t be looked upon unfavorably if you do not do so.

In general, employees and directors may not invest in privately offered, unregistered funds organized by our Company. Before considering such an investment, contact the Personal Account Dealing Group or your Compliance Officer for advice.

Employees subject to the Personal Account Dealing Policy – Firmwide are required to preclear transactions in JPMC securities and are subject to more restrictive personal trading policies when buying or selling JPMorgan Chase common stock or other securities or equivalents. These employees are also subject to quarterly “blackout” periods during which they are prohibited from trading in JPMorgan Chase securities and equivalents. The “blackout” period lasts for approximately two weeks beginning on the first day of a quarter and ending after the release of JPMorgan Chase quarterly earnings.

There are special trading restrictions for some employees.

Certain employees are restricted from engaging in transactions in JPMorgan Chase securities except during quarterly “window” periods. They may also have to comply with other restrictions and requirements. If you are subject to these kinds of restrictions, you will be notified.
Know the rules for trading in the securities of our clients and suppliers.

In general, you should not invest in any securities of a client with which you have (or recently had) significant dealings or responsibility on behalf of JPMorgan Chase if it might appear that your investment is based on confidential information. Note that you may be subject to more restrictive rules, depending on your business unit or location.

If you have information about, or are directly involved in negotiating, a contract with a supplier of JPMorgan Chase, you may not invest in the securities of that supplier.

The policies regarding personal investing are designed to build honest business relationships and promote fairness throughout the marketplace. If you have any questions about our Company’s expectations regarding your personal financial activities, please contact Personal Account Dealing Compliance group, or your Compliance Officer.

2.3 Ethical Business Practices

In addition to compliance with applicable laws and regulations, we expect all employees to hold themselves to the highest standards of ethical conduct. We strive to treat all customers in a fair, ethical and non-discriminatory manner and work to achieve a competitive advantage through superior products and services, never through unethical or illegal business practices.

Always deal fairly and in good faith with our customers, suppliers, competitors, business partners, regulators and other employees. Never take unfair advantage of anyone through manipulation, concealment, abuse of privileged or confidential information, misrepresentation of material facts or any other unfair dealings or practices. Listen carefully to feedback you receive from those doing business with our Company. Our commitment to ethical business practices preserves our Company’s reputation for integrity.

In addition, JPMorgan Chase may have fiduciary obligations to our clients to act in their best interest. This means you must avoid or otherwise address through controls, disclosures or other appropriate steps actual or potential conflicts of interest. Never place your personal interests ahead of your clients.

Protect the interests of JPMorgan Chase.

We have built an extraordinary global team and customer base. Help us respect and protect our most valuable assets. Do not:

- Solicit for a competitor or direct a JPMorgan Chase customer, prospective customer, supplier or other individual or company to one of our competitors
- Solicit or encourage a current JPMorgan Chase employee, consultant, independent contractor, agent or supplier to leave our Company

Reinforcing a strong sense of personal accountability and ownership is a priority at our Company. Take ownership - anticipate, identify and manage the risk and impacts of the decisions and actions you take at work. An employee’s action or inaction may lead to unfair client or customer outcomes, impact market integrity, compromise our Company’s reputation, or negatively impact our internal culture. Employees must be alert to any potential negative effects that their actions or inactions may cause our clients or customers, the markets or our Company. Use your voice - employees are encouraged to escalate concerns, regardless of whether it affects your line of business or you directly and foster an environment where others feel comfortable sharing their concerns.

We are committed to acting with honesty and integrity, dealing fairly, and exercising sound judgment...
Each Line of Business is responsible for communicating to its employees about the laws and regulations that apply to its businesses and maintaining an appropriate compliance program. The following sections outline some key regulatory requirements that apply across our Company.

2.3.1 Anti-money Laundering

Money laundering is the process of taking the proceeds of criminal activity and making them appear legitimate. Money laundering is generally accomplished in three steps — placement of cash or other assets into the financial systems; layering, by moving these assets around multiple accounts or institutions; and the integration of the assets back into the mainstream economy. Money laundering can result from almost any crime, including fraud, drug trafficking and terrorism.

Our Anti-Money Laundering Policy – Firmwide and related procedures are designed to comply with all applicable laws and regulations related to money laundering, terrorist financing and economic sanctions. You are required to comply with these policies, procedures and controls. Specifically:

- Make sure you accurately complete all “know your customer” requirements.
- If your job requires more detailed knowledge of anti-money laundering, counter-terrorist financing and sanctions rules, talk to your manager to receive and complete the necessary training.
- Be alert to — and report — any unusual or suspicious activity to your manager, Anti-Money Laundering Investigations, the Global Financial Crimes Compliance Office or the Risk Manager responsible for anti-money laundering and sanctions compliance.
- Complete all required Compliance training on a timely basis.

2.3.2 Economic Sanctions Regulations and Anti-boycott Rules

U.S. economic sanctions regulations, administered by the U.S. Department of the Treasury’s Office of Foreign Assets Control (or “OFAC”), prohibit anyone subject to the jurisdiction of the U.S. - including financial institutions like ours and our foreign branches and sometimes our non-U.S. subsidiaries - from exporting financial services to certain foreign jurisdictions, governments or individuals. These regulations sometimes also require that assets in which these governments or individuals have an interest be frozen. Economic sanctions can also be imposed by the United Nations, the European Union or other countries, and these may impact our activities as well.

Our Global Anti-Money Laundering Policy and Firmwide Sanctions Standards are designed to achieve compliance with the U.S. economic sanctions regulations. You have a responsibility to know and comply with the policies and procedures that apply to you. Consult with your Line of Business Sanctions Officer (“LSO”) or Regional Sanctions Officer (“RSO”) if you are involved in any transaction or activities that appear to implicate economic sanctions.

What if ...

You and your co-worker disagree on whether to escalate an unusual customer transaction through your normal Line of Business process. What should you do?

You should escalate the matter to your manager and if necessary, contact your Compliance Officer or the Global Financial Crimes Compliance Office for assistance. Remember, everyone is responsible for identifying and escalating potentially unusual or suspicious transactions or activities. Doing so will facilitate further review of the transaction and can help protect you and our Company from any involvement in questionable or illegal activities.
U.S. anti-boycott laws are designed to prevent U.S. companies, including their overseas branches and subsidiaries, from cooperating with illegal foreign boycotts of countries that are friendly to the U.S. In general, these laws prohibit us from:

- Refusing to do business in a certain countries or with companies that do business in certain countries;
- Discriminating against someone based on race, religion, sex, national origin or nationality;
- Furnishing information about someone in response to a boycott-related request, or
- Implementing a letter of credit that contains a condition related to any of the prohibited actions.

Boycott-related requests may arise in a number of ways such as letters of credit and trade transactions, loan syndications and visa applications. Consult with the Global Financial Crimes Compliance Department if you receive any requests that appear to be boycott-related.

2.3.3 Competition, Antitrust and Tying

Competition laws, known in the U.S. as antitrust laws, promote and maintain the benefits of free markets. These laws vary from place to place, but they share core principles that protect competitive market participants, including our Company and our clients. We are committed to complying with the letter and spirit of applicable competition laws wherever we do business.

These laws and our Company policies prohibit agreements among competitors that are deemed collusive or anti-competitive. Examples include agreements to:

- Raise, fix, stabilize, or maintain prices, fees, spreads or any item (e.g., benchmarks, costs) that would ultimately affect price (price fixing)
- Reduce or eliminate competition in a competitive bidding process (bid rigging)
- Divide customers, territories, markets or products (allocation schemes)
- Refuse to deal with a competitor, customer or third party (group boycott)

Predatory or exclusionary conduct that is intended to harm competition is also prohibited.

If you have any question as to whether any conduct may be collusive or anticompetitive, consult with Antitrust Compliance. Even if your work does not involve interaction with a competitor, customer or outside party with which JP Morgan Chase does business, you must review, be familiar with and comply with the Antitrust and Competition Compliance Policy - Firmwide and any related policies adopted by your business unit or region.

Tying arrangements - which force a customer, as a condition of buying one product at a particular price, to have to purchase another (as one example) - are illegal under some circumstances. There are laws that govern tying arrangements involving bank subsidiaries of our Company. You are responsible for being familiar with these rules if they apply to you.

2.3.4 Anti-bribery, Anti-corruption

JP Morgan Chase’s reputation for integrity is central to the success of our business. We must never compromise our reputation by engaging in, or appearing to engage in, bribery or any form of corruption.

You may not give, offer or promise (directly or through others such as third party intermediaries) anything of value to anyone, including government officials, clients, suppliers or other business partners, if it is intended or could reasonably appear as intended to influence improper action or obtain some improper business or other advantage. You also may not solicit or accept anything of value from anyone (directly or through others such as family members) if it is intended or could reasonably appear as intended to improperly influence your decisions on behalf of JPMorgan Chase.

Anything of value is broadly defined and includes but is not limited to:

- Cash or cash equivalents (for example, checks, money orders, securities, gift cards or gift certificates)
- Gifts (e.g., goods or services), see the Gifts and Business Hospitality section
- Business hospitality (e.g., meals or refreshments, tickets to entertainment, travel and related expenses, training and conferences)
- An offer of employment or other work experience, whether paid or unpaid (e.g., full-time employment, unpaid internships)
- Charitable or political contributions

There are heightened risks when interacting with government officials. Special procedures may apply, including preclearance requirements, when providing anything of value to a government official. Government official is defined broadly and includes all officials, employees (regardless of rank or level) or agents, when they are acting in an official capacity on behalf of any government entity (see the Anti-Corruption Policy).

For the purposes of the Code, providing anything of value indirectly through a family member, close associate, business partner, or agent of the government official is considered the same as providing it to the government official directly if it is intended or could reasonably appear as intended to influence improper action or obtain some improper business advantage.

In addition, you may not make facilitation or “grease” payments, which include anything of value given to anyone, including a government official, in his or her personal capacity, to cause the person to perform or expedite performance of a routine duty or function.

We expect all employees to act ethically and we do not tolerate bribery. Consult our Anti-Corruption Policy for the rules and restrictions on these standards. If something seems improper or may involve bribery, contact Anti-Corruption Compliance, your local Compliance Officer or call the Code Reporting Hotline.

2.3.5 Taxes

JPMorgan Chase is committed to complying with both the letter and the spirit of applicable tax laws wherever we operate and ensuring accuracy in the tax-related records we produce and the tax information we are required to report. You may not facilitate any client activities intended to breach applicable tax laws, which may include engaging in activities that would assist a client in evading the payment of taxes that are due and payable or concealing information from tax authorities. As an employee of JPMorgan Chase, you are responsible for being familiar with and complying with related policies and procedures. Be alert to all unusual or suspicious client activities that may have as their purpose or apparent purpose hiding income or assets from tax authorities or evading the application of tax reporting requirements. You must promptly report any violations or potential violations of this section either through the Code of Conduct Reporting Hotline or one of the other methods outlined in Section 1.5.

2.3.6 Other Obligations of Some Employees

Because of their positions within our Company, some employees, including employees in specific Lines of Business or certain jurisdictions, have additional obligations (for example, U.S. Securities Registered Representatives or employees subject to the Prudential Regulation Authority & Financial Conduct Authority U.K. Conduct Rules). If you are one of these employees, make sure you know what is expected of you and meet all applicable obligations.

Additional training and reporting requirements must be satisfied by employees with special regulatory status and those who hold licenses to perform certain financial services activities. Contact your local Compliance Officer if you have questions about licensing and training requirements.
Section 2: A Shared Responsibility to Our Customers and the Marketplace

We all share a responsibility to follow the law and treat our customers the way we would want to be treated – in an open, honest and respectful manner.

2.1 Inside Trading and Information Barriers

- Never buy or sell securities while in possession of MNPI relating to those securities or tip others off to do so.
- Know and comply with the Company’s Information Barriers system.

2.2 Personal Investment Activities

- Follow the personal trading rules and restrictions that apply to you, including trading in JPMorgan Chase securities.

- Do not invest in a competitor of the Company (unless publicly traded) or vendors and suppliers you negotiate with or have information about through work.

2.3 Ethical Business Practices and Conduct Risk

- Complete all KYC requirements and be alert to – and report – any unusual or suspicious transaction or other indication of possible money laundering.
- Never offer, give, solicit or receive anything of value, either directly or indirectly, if it is intended or appears intended to obtain an improper business benefit or expedite the performance of a routine government function.
- Comply with antitrust and competition laws promoting a free and open global marketplace.

Each of us, at every level of our Company, shares a responsibility for preserving what we’ve built and honoring the people who have helped build it. It’s not just about protecting our Company today, but also positioning ourselves for continued success tomorrow. We have a duty to protect JPMorgan Chase assets, systems, information, records and interests – even our Company name – to maintain the trust our shareholders have placed in us and keep our Company strong and thriving.
3.1 Protecting JPMorgan Chase's Assets and Using Them Appropriately

Our assets are the resources we use to conduct our business. Use Company assets for legitimate Company business and appropriately safeguard them including against cyber-related risk and attack, theft, loss, waste or abuse. By protecting our assets, we protect our competitive advantage in the marketplace. You also have a responsibility to extend the same degree of care to assets entrusted to our Company by others.

Our assets include:
• Anything owned, created, obtained or compiled by, or on behalf of our Company
• Physical assets, such as office furnishings, equipment and supplies
• Technology assets, such as computer hardware, software and information systems
• Financial assets, such as cash, securities or other financial instruments and credit cards
• Our Company's name, its brand and our customer relationships
• Information assets, such as intellectual property, including information about products, services, systems and other data, or similar information

Company assets should be used only for the conduct of our Company’s business, except where otherwise provided by the Code or other Company policies. Our Company’s business includes, for these purposes, service related to an outside activity at the request of our Company (for example, service on the board of a not-for-profit at the request of our Company, or at the request of the JPMorgan Chase Market Leadership Team, or service on an advisory committee or on the board of a clearing house, exchange or depository at the request of our Company (see Section 3.3.3)).

All physical and technology assets provided by our Company, whether used inside or outside the JPMorgan Chase workplace, are JPMorgan Chase property and are provided for your business use. Never sell, lend or give them away, regardless of their condition or value, unless you are authorized to do so.

In general, you should not use our assets (including technology or information resources) for your personal activities. Personal use of JPMorgan Chase electronic communication devices (email, telephone, etc.) and assets (JPMorgan Chase email addresses, JPMorgan Chase technology, JPMorgan Chase information resources, etc.) should be kept to a minimum, to the extent permitted in your jurisdiction or business, and comply with JPMorgan Chase policies and procedures, and with applicable laws and regulations. Personal use should not interfere with your business obligations, should not burden JPMorgan Chase’s assets, should not introduce additional risk to our Company, and should not negatively impact or disrupt your colleagues.

Use electronic communications wisely and be aware of our Company’s monitoring practices.

We reserve the right to monitor, review, access, record, and disclose data as we deem appropriate, subject to applicable laws and regulations. You should not expect privacy when using Company resources.

Make sure your use of our Company intranet and internet access complies with our policies. In particular:

• Do not transmit or provide access to confidential information unless it is adequately protected in accordance with Company policies and its transmission is necessary for business purposes.
• Do not use these resources in a way that would violate applicable law (for example, use or sale of controlled substances) or any of our policies (for example, discrimination, harassment, gambling, misuse of confidential information or social media).
• Do not access, download, upload, save or send sexually oriented—or other offensive—materials.
• Do not access, download, upload, save, send or use any proprietary materials—such as software, articles, photographs, pictures or graphs—unless you are authorized to do so.
• Do not send Company information to an external email address for any non-business purpose or to your personal email account for any reason.
Protect our information systems. The threat of a cyber-related attack is a very real risk for our Company.

Never install unauthorized software, applications, hardware or storage devices on your Company-issued computer, and don’t access our network through unauthorized applications or devices. Take care to prevent theft, loss or unauthorized use of electronic information and systems by:

• Using extreme caution in opening email attachments from unknown or suspicious senders
• Protecting your passwords and personal IDs and not sharing them with others
• Ensuring the physical security of information or hardware that is assigned to you

Is my company email address a Company asset?

Yes, your company email address is a Company asset and should only be used for business purposes, including business-related websites. For instance, you should not use your company email address as a username for any new personal website accounts and should use diligent efforts to remove it as a username from any existing personal accounts.

Respect and protect our intellectual property.

Information you create, send, receive, download or store on our electronic or telephonic equipment and systems is Company property. Any invention, discovery, development, concept, idea, process or work related to our Company’s business — no matter what form it takes, whether or not it can be patented or copyrighted, even if you only work on it outside the office — that you develop alone or with others while you work at JPMorgan Chase is referred to as a “Company Invention” and belongs to our Company. As a condition of your employment, you assign to our Company, exclusively, all of your rights, title and interest in any Company Inventions. You are required to provide any documents or other assistance we need to obtain intellectual property rights (such as patents, trademarks and copyrights) for Company Inventions developed during your employment with us.

Please note, if a Company Invention you develop is later copyrighted, it is called a “work made for hire.” As such, our Company owns the copyright to that Company Invention and is not required to acknowledge your role in creating it or ask your permission to modify it, expand on it or benefit from it.

3.2 Maintaining Accurate Records

Recordkeeping policies and controls are essential to the successful operation of our Company and our ability to meet our legal, regulatory and business requirements. Each of us is responsible for the creation and management of accurate, and complete Company records and data. You are also responsible for maintaining the integrity of the records and data and complying with all of the recordkeeping policies, controls and procedures we have in place.

Never falsify any book, record or account that relates to the business of our Company, customers, employees or suppliers or the disposition of our assets. This means being honest and accurate in all aspects of your job, including entries you make on expense reports, timekeeping records, results you record on sales incentive plans and claims you make under our employee benefit plans.
What if ...

I’ve been asked by a client to notarize a document that has already been signed. Can I notarize the document anyway if I know that it is the client’s signature and the client assures me that the signature is genuine?

No, you cannot notarize the document. Any document that requires notarization must be signed in the presence of the commissioned notary public.

Our recordkeeping policies include information about record management, retention and disposition.

These policies and related standards and procedures support our Company with maintaining the records we need to meet our legal, and regulatory requirements, and to securely dispose of records that are no longer needed to safeguard our Company from additional risks. You must never dispose of records or information that may be relevant to pending or threatened litigation or a regulatory proceeding, unless you are authorized to do so by the Legal Department.

We comply fully with regulatory disclosure requirements.

It’s critically important that disclosures we make to regulatory authorities and investors (including regulatory filings) be complete, accurate, timely and understandable. If you are involved in preparing disclosure documents, make sure you are familiar with the requirements and never misrepresent or omit any material facts. If you are asked to provide information to help prepare the disclosure, make sure that what you provide is complete, accurate and informative.

Finance professionals have additional obligations.

Employees who are considered finance professionals have a special responsibility in this regard and must know and comply with the Code of Ethics for Finance Professionals.

3.3 Avoiding Conflicts

You are responsible for avoiding activities or relationships that might affect your objectivity in making decisions as a JPMorgan Chase employee and raising potential conflicts through controls, disclosures or other appropriate steps. Never permit your personal interests to conflict — or appear to conflict — with our Company’s interests. If you are faced with a potential conflict of interest, ask yourself:

- Would public disclosure of my action (or relationship) cause me or our Company embarrassment?
- Would the action (or relationship) lead an outside observer to believe a conflict might exist, even if it actually doesn’t?

If the answer to either question is “yes,” discuss it with your manager or Code Specialist. Always escalate potential conflicts of interest in order to ensure that the proper review has been completed and any required steps are taken. For potential conflicts of interest between clients and the firm, employees should raise to their manager.

It’s not possible to list every situation that could present a potential conflict, but be alert to the following areas where conflicts typically arise. You should be familiar with these, use good judgment and ask for help whenever you are unsure of the proper course of action.
3.3.1 Personal Relationships

Decision-making can become difficult if the person with whom you’re working is someone you know personally, outside of the workplace. Even if you try to remain objective in your business dealings, the personal relationship can create a conflict of interest – or can raise the appearance of a conflict. For that reason, there are certain situations you should avoid.

• In general, you may not act for our Company in any transaction or business relationship that involves yourself, members of your family or other people or organizations where you or your family have a significant personal connection or financial interest. Let another qualified employee handle our Company’s business with these people and organizations. Any such arrangement or exception should be escalated to your manager, Human Resources or Line of Business Compliance Officers.

• Don’t engage in self-dealing or use your position at our Company to derive benefits that aren’t available to others.

• Avoid negotiating with JPMorgan Chase on behalf of others, especially your family and others you have a connection to, if your involvement might be perceived as a conflict.

• Be aware that relationships in the workplace can also present real or perceived conflicts. Make sure you know and understand the specific restrictions that relate to hiring or working with relatives or someone with whom you have a personal relationship.

Employees who are or become relatives or involved in a personal relationship with another employee, consultant or contractor that may result in an actual or perceived conflict of interest must immediately inform their manager or Human Resources representative or Employee Relations.

Managers who become aware of a personal relationship that may result in an actual or perceived conflict of interest must immediately notify their Human Resources representative or Employee Relations.

What if ...

My sister is a Chase customer, and I work in the branch as a teller. Can I cash her check?

No, you can’t cash your sister’s check. You can’t be involved in our Company’s business dealings with your sister.

3.3.2 Personal Finances

Because of the nature of our business, any improper handling of your personal finances could undermine your credibility and our Company’s. It could also cause others to question your decision-making on the job. Handle your personal finances responsibly, with integrity, and in compliance with the law. (Note that this section of the Code discusses personal financial matters. See the Personal Investment Activities section for information about Personal Investment Activities).

In general, you may not participate in any personal financial transaction with fellow employees, customers or suppliers, including shared investments (unless widely held or part of a Company-sponsored, co-investment plan) and investment clubs.
You may not borrow money (other than nominal amounts) from or lend money to or act as guarantor, co-signer or surety for customers, suppliers or other employees, unless the transaction involves a family member. Borrow only from reputable organizations that are in the business of lending. If you borrow from a financial institution, the loan must be obtained on non-preferential terms.

It’s permissible to borrow from – or act as guarantor, co-signer or surety for – relatives or close personal friends (but not if the friendship grew out of a JPMorgan Chase relationship). It’s also permissible to borrow from a customer who is in the financial services business as long as you are not granted preferential treatment. You may also make consumer credit purchases from a customer or supplier in the normal course of business – again, as long as the customer or supplier is not granting you preferential treatment. In every case, use good judgment, look at each situation objectively and, before moving forward, ask yourself how your actions would look to someone outside of our Company.

The purchase of real property owned by our Company – or by a third-party lender if the loan was serviced by our Company – as a result of mortgage foreclosure proceedings or deed in lieu of foreclosure (known as “Real Estate Owned” or REO properties) must be approved, even if you are in another line of business. Note that if you are an employee of Chase Home Lending, you are subject to other restrictions as well; make sure you know the rules that apply to you.

Note also that you may not participate in gambling or betting of any kind, including office pools, at any Company location, or use Company resources (such as email, phone and copy machines) in connection with any gambling or betting activity, even if it is legal in your location.

* For the purposes of the Code of Conduct, “personal fiduciary” is an employee who agrees to act primarily for another’s benefit, such as a trustee, executor, attorney-in-fact or guardian, outside the scope of that employee’s normal job responsibilities at JPMorgan Chase.

3.3.3 Outside Activities

Don’t let your activities outside of JPMorgan Chase reflect adversely on our Company or suggest a possible conflict of interest. As an employee, we expect you to put your job at our Company ahead of other business opportunities, not-for-profit activities, government service or a second job. Be alert to potential conflicts, be proactive in obtaining any necessary approvals or clearances and, finally, be aware that you may be required to discontinue any activity if a conflict arises.

With regard to outside activities, in general you may not:

- Accept a business opportunity from someone who does – or seeks to do – business with JPMorgan Chase if the offer is made because of your position in our Company
- Allow your activities, or the time you spend on them, to interfere with your job performance or work schedule
- Act as a personal fiduciary* for anyone other than a family member or close personal friend (but not if the friendship grew out of a JPMorgan Chase customer or supplier relationship)
• Take for yourself a business opportunity that represents an opportunity for our Company
• Engage in a business that competes with our business
• Work for, or serve as a director, officer of or advisor to, a competitor
• Invest in a competitor unless the investment is in a publicly traded company
• Engage in an activity, investment or business opportunity that is related to your role or responsibilities at JPMorgan Chase

The concept of a “competitor” includes financial services companies and others engaged in any business we are involved in (even if not currently in direct competition with our Company), such as banks, asset managers, depository institutions, credit unions, lenders, investment banks, some insurers and insurance agencies, and securities brokers, dealers and underwriters. If you aren’t sure whether an outside activity involves a competitor, discuss it with your Code Specialist.

Service on the boards of public companies is generally not permitted and is subject to enhanced review and approval requirements. Contact your Code Specialist for additional information.

You are responsible for knowing which activities require preclearance. Consult the Outside Activity Policy for guidance and talk with your Code Specialist to determine next-steps.

Remember, your Code Specialist is your resource for finding out what you need to do and which forms need to be completed. The preclearance forms are available on the Code of Conduct intranet site. You must seek a new approval for a previously approved activity after a certain period of time or whenever your job within our Company changes. You must also notify the Code of Conduct Compliance group when your approved outside activity terminates or your role with respect to the activity changes.

Note also that in addition to complying with the preclearance procedures described in the Code, you must comply with any other applicable Company policy or clearance or reporting requirements. For example, U.S. Securities Registered Representatives may need to disclose their outside activities on their Form U4 with the Licensing & Registration Compliance group. Employees outside the U.S. who have licenses with local regulators may have similar disclosure requirements.

Employees serving on the board of companies where JPMC or an affiliate has an ownership interest must report service to the legal entity’s Line of Business Representative for inclusion on our Company’s legal entity database, the Global Entity Management System. Check with your Code Specialist or Compliance Officer to determine whether you have any additional obligations.

3.3.4 Gifts and Business Hospitality

The exchange of gifts and offers of business hospitality are common business practices, but too often can be misinterpreted or suggest the appearance of something improper, even when there is no improper intent. We are committed to doing business based strictly on the value of products and services we offer and purchase, not on gifts or offers we extend or accept, so we have very strict rules in place that you are required to know and follow. If you ever have questions about our policies or are unsure whether a gift is appropriate (or not), please contact your Code Specialist.

A gift is anything of value and can take many forms...
A gift is anything of value and can take many forms, including meals or refreshments; goods or services; tickets to entertainment or sporting events; the use of a residence, vacation home or other accommodations; a raffle prize; travel expenses; a product or service discount; or charitable or political contributions made on your behalf. In general, anytime a recipient is not required to pay the retail or usual and customary cost for something, it is considered a “gift.” (Note that event tickets can be considered a gift even if you pay the face value for them. See the list of “not-appropriate” gifts.) Keep in mind that gifts given by others to members of your family or to those with whom you have a close personal relationship or to charities designated by you are considered to be gifts to you.

Giving gifts & providing business hospitality — our policy.

Offering gifts and business hospitality may be acceptable unless intended to improperly influence a business decision. Make sure that any gifts or business hospitality you offer are reasonable and customary and conform to our Code and Company policies. In general, you should never give a gift or provide business hospitality that:

• Would violate local laws, industry-specific regulations or the policies of the recipient
• Is intended or could reasonably appear as intended to obtain an improper business advantage
• Could appear to be offered with the intent of influencing someone to do something improper
• Would be considered lavish or inappropriate under the circumstances

Gift-giving to government officials is often governed by very strict laws and regulations, violations of which can have severe consequences for you and for our Company. Contact Anti-Corruption Compliance or your Compliance Officer in connection with any gift to a government official. See Anti-bribery, Anti-corruption.

Some of the Lines of Business and Corporate Functions have specific gift-giving policies and others prohibit gifts entirely. You are responsible for knowing and complying with the policies that apply to you. Contact your Code Specialist for advice on giving gifts and on the Line of Business or Corporate Function approval process for giving gifts.

The Line of Business and Corporate Functions have specific guidelines and restrictions on providing business hospitality, which includes travel and related expenses, meals, refreshments and permitted entertainment, transportation, lodging, training and conferences. Some employees are subject to industry laws and regulations or in certain lines of business may have additional restrictions related to providing business hospitality and/or subject to approval thresholds. You are responsible for knowing and complying with the restrictions that apply to you and obtaining any necessary approvals. Contact your Line of Business or Corporate Function Compliance Officer for advice on providing business hospitality.

Accepting gifts & business hospitality— our policy.

From time to time, you may be offered gifts from a customer, supplier or other company or person doing — or seeking to do — business with us. In general, you are prohibited from accepting gifts of any kind, but there are certain situations where it is permissible. Start by asking yourself:

(1) Did I solicit the gift?
(2) Have I received frequent gifts or offers from this same source?
(3) Would acceptance of it violate any policies of my business unit or location?
(4) Is this gift being given in appreciation for good service or as thanks for our Company’s business?
(5) Is this customer, supplier or company trying to influence or reward me in connection with a business decision or transaction?
(6) Is the gift on the list of “not-appropriate” gifts?
If the answer to any question is "yes," you should not accept the gift. If the answer to all six questions is "no," you may accept the following:

• A gift with a retail value of approximately US$100 or less (or whatever lesser amount determined by your local Compliance unit) given on an occasion when gifts are customary
  Example: A vase that costs US$50 from a customer as a wedding gift

• Advertising or promotional materials with a retail value of US$100 or less (or whatever lesser amount determined by your local Compliance unit)
  Example: A hand-held calculator with a supplier’s logo on it

• Discounts and rebates on merchandise or services offered to the general public or to all employees under a plan negotiated by JPMorgan Chase
  Example: Discounted price for a laptop offered to all Company employees through the Employee Discount Program

• Customary mementos at closing dinners, permitted golf outings and similar functions
  Example: A Lucite paperweight to commemorate a large transaction

• Food or beverages that are not easily returned as long as they are: (1) given on an occasion when gifts are customary; (2) not extravagant; and (3) shared with members of your business unit
  Example: Small fruit basket delivered to your office by a local supplier over the holidays

Note, the restrictions on giving and receiving gifts also applies among employees with a business/client relationship with each other, or among employees that serve in a control function for another unit.

Generally, the restrictions on giving and accepting gifts between you and your family or close personal friends (unless the friendship grew out of a JPMorgan Chase relationship) don’t apply, as long as, it’s clear that the motivation behind the gift is your personal relationship and not Company business. If you receive a gift that is not permitted by our policy, you have a responsibility to politely refuse or return it. Some gifts are “not-appropriate” even if they meet all of the criteria described above. You may not accept the following from any customer, supplier, vendor or other company that does – or seeks to do – business with JPMorgan Chase:

• Cash or cash equivalents (for example, checks, money orders, securities, gift cards or gift certificates)
• Bequests or legacies
• Tickets for sports, concerts or other events for your personal use (unless permitted under one of the categories of acceptable gifts or business hospitality), whether or not you pay for them

A Nonconforming Gift Form must be completed and submitted to your Code Specialist for: 1) any gift not permitted by the Code, Company, Line of Business or Corporate Function policy and 2) frequent offers or gifts from one source, even if individually they are allowed by the Code, Company, Line of Business or Corporate Function policy.

If you receive a gift that you feel you cannot or should not return or refuse, contact your Code Specialist for advice.

Accepting business hospitality, such as meals, refreshments and permitted entertainment, is generally allowed when offered during the course of a meeting or other occasions as long as: (1) the purpose is business related, (2) your attendance relates to your job at JPMorgan Chase, (3) your host is there with you, (4) the cost is reasonable and customary, and (5) it’s an infrequent invitation.

The following entertainment and travel invitations from clients, suppliers or others seeking to do business with JPMC are allowed, but require approval from an officer who reports to a direct report of the JPMC Operating Committee member with a copy to your Code Specialist:

• Invitations to parties, sports outings or similar events extended exclusively to groups of ten or more JPMorgan Chase employees
• Travel or accommodation expenses unless agreed as part of expense reimbursement in the context of a business transaction between the party providing the travel or accommodation and JPMorgan Chase
Some employees are subject to industry laws and regulations or in certain lines of business may have additional restrictions related to accepting business hospitality and/or subject to approval thresholds. You are responsible for knowing and complying with the restrictions that apply to you and obtaining any necessary approvals.

Contact your Code Specialist or Compliance Officer for general advice on accepting business hospitality and Line of Business or Corporate Function approval processes for accepting business hospitality that may apply to you.

What if ...

One of my suppliers sent me tickets to a game for my favorite sports team to thank me for expediting the signing of their contract with our Company. Can I accept it?

No, you may not accept it. Even if the value is below the US$100 limit, you cannot accept this gift because it is being offered as a reward in connection with your conduct of our Company’s business and is therefore inappropriate. You should return the gift to the supplier with a note explaining why you are doing so. Sample “no-thank-you” notes are available on the Code of Conduct intranet site, or you can contact your Code Specialist for help.

3.4 Acting on Behalf of Our Company

Your authority to act on behalf of JPMorgan Chase is governed by various laws, regulations, corporate charters, by-laws and board resolutions as well as Company policies and procedures. Never sign any documents or otherwise represent our Company, or authorize any action on our Company’s behalf, unless you are specifically authorized to do so. Know the limits on your authority and don’t take any action that exceeds those limits.

Any delegation of authority, where permitted, should be limited in scope and closely managed to prevent abuse.

3.5 Communicating Responsibly

We respect your right to engage in social, professional and political dialogue outside the workplace. We are also committed to making sure that communications about our Company and its business are accurate, reflect our Company’s views and are made by employees who are authorized to speak on our behalf. In addition, we recognize our obligation to comply with regulatory requirements regarding various types of communication and to protect the confidentiality of our business and customer information.

Except as described in section 3.5.1 and in our Social Media Policy, you should not comment on or provide information related to our Company’s business or any subject matter related to your job responsibilities or expertise in public forums unless you are specifically authorized to do so. This rule applies whether you identify yourself as a JPMorgan Chase employee or not.

Remember that “information relating to our Company’s business” is broadly defined and includes anything related to:

- The financial services industry
- Our Company itself and its businesses
- Our confidential information
- Our products, strategy, security, technology and tech support, procurement practices or legal/regulatory/compliance issues
- Our customers, business partners, suppliers, directors, employees or competitors

Note that nothing in the Code should be interpreted to prevent employees from engaging in activities that are protected under laws and regulations that allow employees to discuss or disclose compensation information.
3.5.1 Use of Social Media and Other Online Activity

Use good judgement in your use of social media and other online activity. Your employment postings on internet sites and social media sites may include the fact that you work for JPMorgan Chase, your job title, a high level job description (e.g., no specific project/initiative details, no proprietary application or software names) and your general office location. Be mindful not to disclose confidential and/or proprietary information, and don’t post, seek or provide recommendations or referrals by or of other employees, customers or suppliers (current or former) regarding their responsibilities at JPMorgan Chase, unless you are authorized to do so. Certain regulated users, Global Technology employees and those with high risk entitlements may have additional social media use restrictions. Please refer to our Social Media Policy for the rules and guidance.

3.5.2 Speaking on Behalf of Our Company

Whether online or in public speaking engagements, be alert to situations in which you may be perceived as someone who is representing or speaking for JPMorgan Chase. Don’t make any statements on our behalf unless authorized to do so. Refer all media inquiries to the Media Relations Office.

3.5.3 Other Types of Communication

Public testimony (for example, as an expert witness), publications and speaking engagements relating to our business and media inquiries require preclearance. Contact Media Relations for your Line of Business for preclearance.

Don’t seek or provide recommendations, sponsorships, or referrals by or of fellow employees (current or former), unless you are authorized to do so.

Contact your HR Business Partner with any questions.

Any recommendations, referrals or sponsorship related to clients should be escalated to your manager first, and if necessary Legal or Compliance depending on the matter.

Subpoenas directed at our Company and our employees concerning civil, criminal or regulatory matters are centrally managed, and only authorized employees are permitted to respond to subpoenas. Refer any subpoenas or legal papers served to the Legal Department.

JPMorgan Chase testimonials or endorsements for suppliers, including those referenced in marketing materials and press releases or in response to media inquiries, are generally not allowed. Any exceptions should be directed to and reviewed by Global Supplier Services.

Before engaging in any of these activities, consult the applicable policy or procedure.

What if ...

I want to blog about financial services on my own computer, on my own time, without using the JPMorgan Chase name, or divulging any confidential information. Is that allowed?

No. Again, regardless of whether you identify yourself as a JPMorgan Chase employee or not, you may not comment on, or provide information relating to, any subject matter that relates to your job responsibilities in social or business networking sites or public forums unless you are specifically authorized to do so.
3.6 Leaving JPMorgan Chase

As a condition of working for us, there are certain responsibilities you will have as you leave our Company and as your employment with our Company ends, including:

• Providing advance notice of resignation for many employees
• Returning all Company assets in your possession
• Maintaining the confidentiality of information, not only of our Company but of those individuals and companies that do business with us; this does not prevent you from reporting to the government or regulators, your attorney or a court under seal, concerns of conduct that you believe to be in violation of law, or retaliation for reporting a concern
• Refraining from buying or selling securities while in possession of MNPI relating to those securities (insider trading)
• Assisting with any investigations, litigation and the protection of intellectual property related to your job

Certain senior employees have additional obligations for one year after they leave our Company including prohibitions in soliciting or hiring JPMorgan Chase employees or soliciting certain customers. Some employees are subject to other post-employment restrictions. You have a responsibility to know and comply with the requirements that apply to you. Consult with your Human Resources Business Partner if you have any questions.

Even after you leave JPMorgan Chase, you can report potential or actual violations of the Code of Conduct through the toll free Code of Conduct Reporting Hotline at 1-855-JPMCODE (1-855-576-2633) and through the various reporting resources as identified in the Sharing Concerns and Reporting Violations section.

Nothing is more vital to the long-term growth of JPMorgan Chase than our ability to attract and retain talented and dedicated employees. A diverse network of people, a vibrant mix of cultures, a broad range of skills and experiences – we celebrate all the people of JPMorgan Chase around the world. We recognize that our employees are our most valuable asset. Our success requires that we treat each other, and our customers and suppliers, respectfully and fairly, and that we all stay true to the values embedded in our culture: personal commitment, honesty, teamwork, diversity and community awareness.
4.1 Diversity and Inclusion

We value the contributions of every employee. A diversity of colleagues means a diversity of ideas and a more stimulating work experience. It also means that our workforce reflects the diverse set of customers we serve and helps us to address — and respond to — a wide variety of needs and opportunities.

We are committed to maintaining a safe, productive, diverse, professional, collegial and secure work environment in which all individuals are treated with humanity, respect and dignity.

We prohibit discrimination, harassment, bias or prejudice in our workplace and against our workforce based on an individual’s race, color, national origin or ancestry, ethnic origin, citizenship status, creed, religion, religious affiliation, age, sex/gender, pregnancy, maternity, paternity, caring responsibilities, marital status, civil partnership, sexual orientation, transgender status, gender identity or expression, genetic information, physical or mental disability or protected condition, military or veteran status, an individual having been a victim of domestic violence, sexual assault or abuse, an individual being the victim of a crime, membership in the Traveller community or any other community group protected under applicable law, or any other status protected under applicable local law.

We do not tolerate discrimination, harassment or inappropriate or abusive conduct by or against employees, customers, suppliers, contractors or any other individuals who conduct business with our Company. We will not pay or reimburse you for membership in, or expenses incurred at, organizations with discriminatory practices.

Examples of unacceptable conduct include jokes or negative stereotyping, threats, physical contact, derogatory comments, teasing, bullying, repeatedly requesting a personal relationship when the recipient of the request has declined, intimidation or other offensive or abusive conduct that has the purpose or effect of violating a person’s dignity, or creating a hostile or offensive environment or can reasonably be expected to cause an individual to feel uncomfortable, intimidated, threatened, bullied, humiliated, offended, denigrated or distressed. Unacceptable conduct also includes conduct resulting from excessive consumption of alcohol.

Harassment or inappropriate conduct can occur between members of the same or opposite sex and is prohibited regardless of sex, gender identity or whether the individual submits to it or rejects it. It may be obvious or subtle and includes any unwelcome sexual advance, requests for sexual favors or other verbal or nonverbal behavior or physical contact of a potentially sexual nature or gender based stereotype that unreasonably interferes with work performance, is made a condition of employment or creates an intimidating, hostile or offensive work environment.

A diversity of colleagues means a diversity of ideas and a more stimulating work experience.

What if ...

I overheard a colleague referring to one of our coworkers using potentially offending language. What should I do?

If you’re willing to do so, say something directly to your colleague. If your colleague does not listen to your concerns or you do not otherwise want to raise the issue directly, ask for support from your manager or colleagues. We all own the culture at the firm and need to be willing to further it whenever the opportunity arises. By working together whenever an issue arises, we ensure a productive and inclusive environment.

That said, whether you talk to your colleague or not, issues, such as harassment, should always be escalated to Human Resources or through the Code Reporting Hotline in a timely manner. Upholding our Code means sharing concerns, even though it may be easier to look the other way. We are counting on you saying something so the workplace can be better for everyone.
We do not tolerate discrimination or harassment and take all allegations seriously. It is each employee's responsibility to report timely any conduct that is unlawful, abusive or otherwise violates our policies.

4.2 A Safe Workplace

A safe and healthy workplace is important to the wellbeing of every employee. We rely on you to comply with applicable laws and Company policies as they relate to the health, safety and security of our workforce, our customers and others who may be present on our premises.

Speak up about harmful activity.

We are committed to a non-violent working environment, free of threats, intimidation and physical harm. Any acts or threats of violence towards another person or Company property should be reported immediately. The unauthorized possession or use of weapons, or menacing references to weapons, while at work, on Company property or while on Company business or during Company sponsored events, is also prohibited.

We work in an industry where the threat of criminal activity is real. Practice good physical security habits, and be alert to ensure the safety of co-workers and customers. Don’t allow unauthorized individuals into secure areas. Anyone asking to make a delivery or provide a service should be able to show valid identification, which should indicate, where appropriate, their affiliation with the organization they represent. We rely on you to promptly report any criminal activity or situations that could pose a threat to you or to others.

Report any hazardous conditions in the workplace.

If you become aware of any actual or potential health or safety hazard, report it immediately.

4.3 Alcohol-free and Drug-free Workplace

We recognize that use of alcohol or illegal drugs can create serious health and safety risks and have implemented alcohol and drug-free workplace policies.

You are not permitted to manufacture, distribute, possess, sell or attempt to sell, receive or use illegal drugs, including drug paraphernalia, or be under the influence of illegal drugs (or abuse controlled substances) on Company property or while conducting Company business. Prohibited drugs include controlled substances that are prohibited by local law (outside the U.S.) or under federal law (in the U.S.).

Bringing alcohol for consumption in the workplace, drinking or being under the influence of alcoholic beverages in the workplace or while conducting JPMorgan Chase business is also prohibited, except for moderate and responsible consumption of alcoholic beverages in appropriate social situations where alcohol is served during a Company-sanctioned event.

You should also conduct yourself appropriately in social settings outside of the workplace. Inappropriate behavior is not excused or justified due to being under the influence of alcohol or other substances.
Section 4: A Shared Responsibility to Each Other

We all share a responsibility to treat each other respectfully and fairly, and foster an inclusive work environment.

Section 4 Principles: A Shared Responsibility to Each Other

4.1 Diversity and Inclusion

➢ Treat others with dignity, and respect the diversity of cultures, backgrounds and experiences that make up our workforce.
➢ Report any potential or actual behavior that is unlawful, abusive or otherwise violates our policies.
➢ Discrimination and harassment are not tolerated – any behavior that creates an intimidating, hostile or offensive work environment is prohibited.

4.2 A Safe Workplace

➢ Report any criminal activity or situations that can pose a threat to you or others. Acts or threats of violence should be reported immediately.

4.3 Alcohol-free and Drug-free Workplace

➢ Do your part to promote an alcohol-free and drug-free workplace.

With success comes responsibility... the responsibility to be a good global citizen, to be good stewards of the resources entrusted to us and to leverage our success in order to make a difference in the communities where we live, work and play.
5.1 Political Activities

We respect your right to engage in personal political activity, but make sure your activities are lawful and appropriate and do not involve the use of Company time or resources (including facilities, equipment, stationery, email, phones, supplies or mailing lists). You must also comply with any rules that may apply to your Line of Business or your specific position with our Company.

Know the policy on volunteer activity and solicitations.

If you wish to volunteer for a political campaign, do so on your own time and as an individual, not as a representative of our Company. Many volunteer political activities, such as serving on the board of a political committee, hosting an event or taking a leadership position with a campaign, also involve fundraising. When fundraising for a candidate or political organization:

• Ensure that your activities can’t be viewed as connected with your position at JPMorgan Chase
• Do not use Company email, stationery, office supplies, administrative staff or other resources unless specifically approved by the Legal or Compliance departments
• Do not share or make use of Company intellectual or intangible property, including client lists, employee email addresses and research reports
• Do not contact other employees during work hours or on Company premises to solicit political contributions or participation in any political activity

Please refer to the political contribution and fundraising policies specific to your Line of Business. If you want to hold any political office, whether elected or appointed, make sure to obtain preclearance.

What if ...

A friend of mine is running for political office. Can I help her out with the campaign?

Yes, your volunteer support is your personal business unless your role in the campaign will involve fundraising or your Line of Business has a different policy. Fundraising activity will be subject to the approval guidelines that apply to your Line of Business. In no case may you use JPMorgan Chase resources — including Company time, phones, emails or the Company name — to advance the campaign.

Know what’s permitted in terms of political contributions.

You have the right to make personal contributions from your own funds, subject to applicable legal limits, regulatory requirements and Line of Business or corporate policies, but you cannot be reimbursed or compensated by our Company for any contribution you make. Because our Company conducts business with government entities, certain employees are subject to additional limitations on their personal political contributions (for example, Operating Committee members, employees in Public Finance and Asset Management, and other areas serving government clients). You are responsible for being aware of — and complying with — any rules and Line of Business or corporate policies that apply to you.

Contact Global Political Law, your Line of Business Compliance Officer or Code Specialist with questions about personal political contributions, and be especially sensitive if giving to officials who are part of the decision-making process on matters related to our Company. For more information, see the Ethical Business Practices section.
What about political contributions on behalf of JPMorgan Chase?

You may not offer or give anything to a public official, either directly or through an intermediary, to secure an advantage. In the U.S., federal, state and local laws may prohibit or limit political contributions of Company funds (including the purchase of fundraising event tickets) as well as in-kind contributions (such as the use of corporate facilities or staff or making a loan at a preferential rate). Local law in countries outside the U.S. can also impose restrictions.

Our Company does not use corporate funds to contribute to, or make independent political expenditures on behalf of, candidates, political party committees or political action committees. We also restrict trade associations and certain social welfare organizations (in the U.S., “501(c)(4)” entities) to which we belong from using our dues for such election-related activity.

Government Relations may from time to time approve corporate funds to support or oppose a state or local ballot initiative that could materially affect our Company or our business operations. In addition, Government Relations administers the JPMorgan Chase Political Action Committee (or PAC), which solicits contributions from eligible employees, as permitted by law.

Occasionally, Government Relations may host officials to discuss public policy at a Company function, or organize a fundraiser for PAC-eligible employees. Employees outside of Government Relations may not arrange such political events, use our Company name to solicit political contributions or engage in other political activities on behalf of our Company. All Company-sponsored political expenditures and activity (including using Company facilities for political meetings or events) must be pre-approved by and managed through Government Relations, with guidance from our Legal Department, and must comply with our Code, the Anti-Corruption Policy, other Company policies, and applicable laws.

Meetings with government officials and lobbying activities require preclearance.

Other than sales calls, regulatory meetings or research contacts, all official JPMorgan Chase engagement with government officials must be precleared with Government Relations.

The following activities must also be precleared with Government Relations before they occur: all lobbying and political intelligence activities related to financial services or our business, including the hiring of consultants; any grassroots lobbying campaign; and Company participation in trade groups’ lobbying efforts. Before contacting Government Relations regarding any proposed contact, engagement, membership or payment relating to a matter that may be subject to an information barrier or similar restriction on the sharing of information internally, contact Global Political Law for guidance and, if appropriate, your Line of Business Compliance Officer for approval.

5.2 Charitable Contributions

While we encourage you to become involved with charitable organizations, please make sure that your participation does not unreasonably interfere with your job at JPMorgan Chase. Remember that soliciting customers, suppliers and other employees for contributions or other participation is generally prohibited or restricted, and many of our locations have specific policies governing these activities. You must comply with any restrictions and policies that apply to you.

Sometimes, customers or suppliers ask that we make a contribution to a charity or nonprofit organization. Charitable contributions may not be given as a condition of or in order to influence a business decision. To determine whether you can make a charitable contribution at the request of a customer or supplier, you must refer to the approval guidelines specific to your Line of Business or region. Note that any contribution requested by or that would benefit a government official requires special preclearance under the Anti-Corruption Policy.
5.3 Human Rights

We support fundamental principles of human rights across all our lines of business in each region of the world in which we operate. We acknowledge the United Nations Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights as the recognized framework for corporations to respect human rights in their own operations and through their business relationships.

We are committed to respecting the human rights of our employees through our internal employment policies and practices. We also have a range of policies and procedures that pertain to human rights issues across our business and supply chain. Please refer to our Company’s Human Rights Statement and U.K. Modern Slavery Act Group Statement for more information.

5.4 Corporate Responsibility

At JPMorgan Chase, corporate responsibility is integral to how we conduct our business. We believe more people should have access to equal opportunity to achieve economic success. Our model for impact focuses on four strategic drivers of inclusive growth – jobs and skills, small business expansion, neighborhood revitalization and financial health. We engage extensively with government, civic and local leaders to understand their challenges and help forge solutions. Our efforts extend to and inform a range of activities and functions including the JPMorgan Chase Institute, Government Relations and promoting Sustainable Finance. Visit MyCR to learn more about how you can get involved.

5.5 Environmental Stewardship

As a global provider of financial advisory and lending services for clients in various sectors and geographies around the world, we recognize that our business decisions have the potential to impact surrounding communities and the environment. JPMorgan Chase believes that balancing environmental with financial priorities is fundamental to sound risk management and a core part of corporate responsibility. We take environmental and social issues very seriously, including the potential reputational and financial risk such issues can present to our Company, and we encourage all our employees and business units to do the same.

When dealing with suppliers, customers and clients, let them know that JPMorgan Chase is working hard to make its operations as sustainable as possible and that we encourage others to do the same. Please refer to our Company’s environmental policies and initiatives.

Closing Thoughts

At JPMorgan Chase, acting with integrity is paramount – and it applies to every aspect of our Company.

When you find yourself faced with an ethical dilemma on the job, it may be tempting to do the wrong thing “just this once,” or because “no one will know,” or even because “everyone else is doing it.” But lowering our standards – even “just this once” – can erode the integrity of our whole Company. Maintain your personal (and our Company’s) integrity at all times and in all places; even an innocent act that appears unethical can have negative consequences. Ultimately, our reputation depends on our ability to do the right thing, even when it’s not the easy thing.

Remember that help is available. If you have a question about the Code of Conduct, or you are in an ethical dilemma, or you aren’t sure what to do in any situation, you can contact your Code Specialist for guidance.

Also remember that it is your responsibility to report any violations you know about and even any that you suspect. You can contact the Code Reporting Hotline or one of several other reporting channels.

Finally, remember that JPMorgan Chase doesn’t tolerate retaliation against anyone who raises an issue or concern in good faith. If you seek advice, raise a concern or report suspected acts of misconduct, you are complying with our Code and helping to maintain an ethical JPMorgan Chase.

Code of Conduct – it begins with you.
